JOING ROADLESS

Recommended road ban would have little effect on Magic Valley

By N.S. Nokkentved Times News writer

TWIN FALLS - A proposal to end road building and most logging in national forest areas already identified as roadless will have little effect locally.

The U.S. Forest Service Monday released an environmental impact statement, recommending a ban on any further road building on nearly 50 million acres identified as roadless, including 8.4 million acres in Idaho.

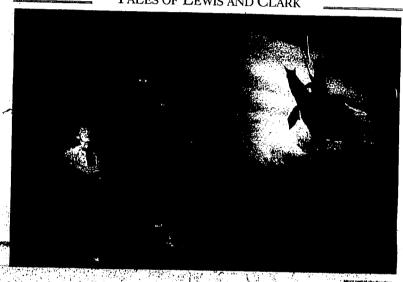

In the Sawtooth forest, the proposal would not affect any planned development or logging. Most areas suitable for development already are developed, and the forest has no proposals for any new roads. "We don't think it's going to have much of an impact at all," Sawtooth National Forest spokesman Ed Waldapfel said. The document also recommends halting commercial logging in those areas except for

Skatepark plan still rolling, despite setback

Group reviews ways to raise more money

TWIN FALLS - The wheels of a city skettepark project have jammed temporarily while a local, skateboarders association reviews construction plans and ways to construction plans and ways to mise more money to belp pay for the struggling project.

"I'm pretty cartificant that we'll have a skatepark before Jerome Wendell has a new school," said Wendel has a new school," said Polluma of the Magic Valley Skateboarders' Association.

The association received a blow last week when construction bids came in higher than expected – 5172,556 and 5180,865, exceeding the 5135,000 (try leaders and members of the association had hoped to pay for the 10,000 square-foot concrete skatepark.

The city has agreed to put in $90,000, if the skateboarders' association could match it. The organization has raised about $64,000 in cash since 1997, when it was founded.

About $21,000 has been spent on architectural fees. The city paid $11,000, and the skateboarders' association paid the rest.

That means the city will only put in $78,688 now. The association must come up with the rest.

A tough goal when the project's towest bid so far is $172,555.

Getting the project's construction cost down is an important goal, said Kate Lopez, a skate-boarder's association leader. But so is raising at least another $40,000.

"The project is definitely going to be built," she said. "We'll reconcile with all the parties involved and see if we can recluce the price of the project as much as possible. likely to take effect in early January.

After months of hearings and deliberations, the independent Postal Rate Commission approved the new rates Monday to offset rising costs. But it rejected some of the Postal Service's proposed higher rates—such as a penny more to send postcards and one cent more for a letter's second ounce.

The commission also for the first time set a one-pound Priority Mail rate of $3.50. Util now, people sending anything up to two pounds have paid the $3.20 two-pound rate. It also raised the two-pound rate to $3.55.

Penny hike for U.S. stamps

The U.S. Postal Service is planning to raise the rate for a liest-class stamp by 1 cent, probably in January 2001. Here are the actual prices for a first-class stamp since 1971 and the adjusted-for-influen prices for the same stamp.

The Blue Ribbon Coalition, a motorized recreation advocacy group, praised the document.

"I'm glad to see that the Forest Service has apparently recognized that managed (off-highway vehicle) use can occur on recreational roads and trails that exist in roadless areas, "said Don Amador, the coalition's western representative. The law requires a 30-day delay before the administration can issue a final decision on the roadless initiative.

Though little would change in the Sawtooth forest, Craig and other critics have said the proposal would lock people out of public lands. Gehrke disagrees.

"If Clinton signs this, that land will still be there for the American people – the next day and 20 years from now," he said. "Anybody can still get into any of those areas and do 90 percent of what was going on beforehand."
That includes off-road vehicles and dirt bikes, "but they'll have to check the chainsaw," Gethre said.
Some tree cutting could continue in some roadless areas, including firewood for personal use and Christmas tree cutting, the document says.

President signs elderly program bill

WASHINGTON (AP)

President Clinton on Monday signed legislation renewing a number of programs for senior citizens, including the popular Meals-on-Wheels service and legal assistance for the elderly. The law authorizing those programs expired five years ago but they continued to be funded through the federal budget. The measure signed by Clinton renews job training and pension counseling programs and creates a new family caregiver program to provide assistance to family members who care for frail older family members.

Scientists discover lemur species

By The Associated Press

Scientists working in Madaguscar announced Monday that they have discovered three previously unknown species of mouse lemurs, the world's smallthouse tenturs, the worth a small-est primate.

Lemurs are the most primitive primates and are among the world's most endangered species. The newly discovered lemurs represent a small but encouraging sign to conservationists.

Madagascar is the world's only home to about 40 species of lemurs, including two previously known species of mouse lemurs. An international team confirmed the new varieties by differences in their skulls, teeth and other physical characteristics. "It's incredibly rare to discover a new species of primate, let alone three new species," as Steven Goodman of the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago, who participated in the study. Other participants were from Germany and Madagascar. The three newly discovered species inhabit only the dry, dense forests along the island's west coast. They are about the size of a chipmunk and weigh a few ounces. They are about the size of a chipmunk and weigh a few ounces. They are about the only at night.

One senior aide said some people in the cam-paign have been discussing such a deal themselves, and that it could be "a real option." But another aide said the GOP campaign was unlikely to accept a statewide hand count, because it would con-flict with Bush's current position that manual counts are unreli-able.

that manual counts are unreable.

Still, senior Bush aides left the door open, presumably in case their attempts to stop the manual recounts should fail.

Gore has not yet made such an offer to the Bush campaign, but a senior Gore adviser said the idea might become attractive to both sides if they reach a legal stale-mate in the next few days.

Officials in the two campaigns agreed to discuss the idea for a compromise on condition they not be identified.

agreed to discuss the suea to a compromise on condition they not be identified. On Monday, Bush asked a federal judge to block the manual recounts under way in three counties where Democrats believe the Gore vote was undercounted. The judge refused. Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris, a Republican, has announced she will refuse to certify any results received after 5 pm. Tuesday, a deadline too early for most of the manual recounts on muet. Democrats have sued to prevent her from establishing that cutoff.

This monumental bringe has inspired Idaho environmentalists to target a big prize. They are clamoring for Clinton to declare a 2.7 million-acre "Owyhee-Bruneau Canyonlands National Monument" before his meter runs out. If they succeed, the public's use of the public's land will once again be curtailed without the preliminary niceties of public discussive. The case for declaring this enormous monument (more than half the size of Massachusetts) is far from persuance of the public discussive. The environmentalists' belief argument is that monument status would restrain rampant tourism and Chappaqua.

Boomer split still hasn't healed

n retrospect, we probably should have expected that the first presidential election between two baby boomers would result in came of age in the 1960s was divided by so many forces it never has gotten its act together.

Al Gore and George W. Bush are not perfect embodiments of the split within their generation, but they reflect the opposing tendencies that have their roots in that stormy decade. It's been 20 years since I wrote about that generation and its characteristics in a book called "Changing of the Guard." The premise of the book was hilariously off the mark. I thought the 1980s would end the long ascendagey in American politics and government of the World War II veterans - the generation that occupied the O-ul Office from Dwight D. Eisenhower through Jimmy Carter, the incumbent president when the book was published in the autumn of 1980. I predicted that in the years just shead they would be replaced by the boomers. Two months after it was published, America elected its oldest president, America elected its oldest president, America elected its oldest president of the world War II vet. And he was succeeded by yet another man who had been in uniform during the war against the Nazis and imform during the war against the Nazis and inform during the war against the Nazis sand benefit of the presidence. But it was not difficult to identify Japan, George H.W. Bush. So much for a reporter's prescience.

But it was not difficult to identify some of the men and women, then in their 30s and 40s, who were good bets to be part of the successor generation of American lendership. Bill Clinton, Al Gore, Newt Gingrich and Trent Lott were all among the interviews that went into the book, along with David Stockman, Donna Shalala, Bruce Babbitt and many others who later became familiar public figures. George W. Bush was not – having been at the time caught up in the activities he summarizes by saying that "when I was young and irresponsible, I did things that were irresponsible."

What emerged from the hundreds of interviews in the book was a clear sense of the differences between the generation then in power and the successor generation.

generation.

They can be summarized this way.
The leaders from Eisenhower through the elder Bush were shaped by two major experiences—the Great Depression and World War II. Those were immense challenges, which this nation survived only by pulling together all of its moral and material resources, a shared experience which required ences for a larger cause and a common enterprise.

The shaping experiences of the boomer generation were of a very different character. They included the civil rights revolution, the women's rights movement, the controversy over abortion and, perhaps most of all, the divisive debate over V: tnam.

Every one of those experiences polarized Americans – most of all the young men and women who were at the forefront of those battles. To a significant degree, the sides they chose back then pro-choice or pro-life, feminist or traditionalist - continue to determine their political alignments now.

Al Gore opposed the Vietnam War

But served a brief stint in that country;
Bush and his running mate, Dick Cheney, supported the war, though neither served on active duty, Gore's run' ning mate, Joe Lieberman, went south to join the civil rights demonstrators, in either of the Republican nominees took an active role in that struggle.
You still hear the echoes of those in unresolved arguments. I remember the speech Marilyn Quayle gave at the in Republican National Convention in 1992 – a speech in which she almost hissed through clenched teeth at Hilliary Rodham Clinton: We weren't all like in you and that fusband of yours. I turned to my Washington Post colleague Dan, Balz, who is of that generation, and said.
"I have this picture in my head that, when all of you raght the nursing in-homes, you are going to be learning on, your rockers and beating on each other your rockers and beating on each other laver resoved those arguments from the 1950s."

Is it far-fetched to say that the stale-y-mate in this first election of the new

Is it far-fetched to say that the stale, Is it far-fetched to say that the stalle, mate in this first election of the new 1; century reflects those divisions? I don't think so. The economic issues in this +0; time of prosperity were far less sharply drawn than the moral and cultural issues. part of the context of the 2000 can.

The exit polls from last week's elections give age breaks in the electorate. The voters between 45 and 59 most of whom came of age during the 1960s — split 48 percent for Gore and 48 percent for Bush. Until they make up their minds, deadlock is likely in this country.

Under couch Mike Shanahan, the Broncos have beaten Oakland in 11 of their last 12 meeting.

The Broncos (6-4) are still two games behind the Raiders, who could have just about wrapped up the AFC West with a win.

But Denver will have the tiebreaker if they can make up those games and is in the thick of the AFC wild-card race.

The showdown was the last Monday Night Football game at Mile High Stadjum.

The Broncos took a 24-10 lead early in the fourth quarter on an 11-yard TD pass to Byron Chamberlain from Brian Griese, who missed a little more than season and a string of 17.

356,109 metric tons of potatoes and exported 354,413 tons according to Sval Topics, a potato-industry report by the Washington State Potato Commission.

Here's what happened:
Canadian production of French fries has been increasing for the past five to six years, driven by lower foreign-exchange rates and a freight advantage into the heavily populated Midwest and Eastern United States.

It costs more to ship French fries from Othello, Adams County, Wash, than it does from Central Canada. With the Canadian dollar at 65 U.S. cents,

Canadian producers have a real advantage:
Washington producers have an advantage on the Pacific Rim, shipping potatoes to countries throughout Asia. That's where almost all the U.S. exports go.
So, odd as it seems, the United States exports French fries from Washington state and imports them from Canada. The market evens out in the end. Or does it?
"It's an example of globalization of our industry," said John Thompson of the Potato Growers of Idaho. "We know these comparies are going around the globe producting and processing potatics and the producting and processing potatics are going a country of the globalization of the potato going a country of the globalization of the potato going around the globe producting and processing potatics are going as the globalization of the Growth in the world Frenchifty market has slowed from the early 1990s, but the market is still expanding 3 percent a year, according to the growers report. Industry experts say that growth means the industry probably will be successful in the long run.

But even strong export markets are not a sure bet. The American Potato Trade Alliance has been trying to get Thailand to reduce tariffs on frozen French fries.

Thailand said it hoped to develop its own French-fry industry and that questions about tariffs should be addressed in multilateral World Trade Organization negotiations. It is hard to tell where potatoes would land in those complicated ralks.
What to make of all this? Growers fret about prices and markets, wondering where their crop will go. Processors keep an eye on exports and how they will grow. Canadian and other potential exporters see a market in the United States. Consumers benefit from lower prices in the store.

Avista chairman resigns amidst legal woes

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) –
Facing a federal investigation and lawsuits by shareholders, former Chief Executive Officer Tom Matthews has resigned as chairman of Avisia Cop.
Matthews resigned last month as CEO, and had said he planned to stay as chairman through the end of the year. He resigned from the board Friday. The federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission is investigating whether Avista Energy intentionally manipulated the futures market to drive up the price of a large electricity futures contract in summer 1998, The Spokensen-Review of Spokane reported Monday.

The state facilitates relocations of Idaho's permanently dislocated workers - that is, workers who lose their jobs and have no job opportunities in their fields in their communities.

Under the federal Workforce Investment Act, Idaho reimburses up to $500 of such a worker's expenses incurred in an out-of-the-area job search, Larry Hertling, the state's dislocated worker coordinator, said earlier this fall. Those expenses include driving to job interviews, for example.

Officials meet, discuss farming

Times-News writer

BURLEY – The key to the future of farming is the partner-flip between the producer and seg-related industries, one local agribusinessman said.

And Bill Mendenhall, a partner in Wheatland Agribusiness in Heyburn, challenged local leaders to bring in potential partners. "We're soing to have to invite agricultural-based industry (to the area)," said Mendenhall, who spet Monday with about 10 local officials, businessmen and farmers to discuss the future of agriculture.

'Yîmes have changed and farms operate like any other business. They operate as partnerships, are not operator-owned, and where they once dealt in open but impersonal markets, markets are now exclusive and personal, Mendenhall said.

Farming has become agribusi-

Mendenhall said.
Farming has become agribusiness.
"I hate to see the words 'farming and 'farmer' go. But it isn't that anymore," he said.
But farming is a unique "corporation," because the grower doesn't know the cost of production when he goes to plant the crop, Mendenhall said. And that has to change.
"If you'll sell a crop first, before you grow it, you'll have much better control of it," he said.
Through horizontal ownership, where growers, processors, and feedlots partner up, farmers can cover production costs and manager risk, said Dennis Curtis, who is in the real estate business and does consulting work for agribusinesses.
Some people voiced concern over the demise of the family darm, on which this country was built.

Gary Turner, president of the Idaho Farmers Union, would like to see the family farm persevere, but acknowledges it won't. "The world has a materialistic focus. It feeds on itself," Turner focus. It feeds on itself," Turner said.

And what scarers Turner is the high cost of water, electricity and transportation compared with other parts of the world, promping processing plants to purchase their raw product elsewhere.

Burley City Council member Curis Mendenhall urged officials on all levels of government to work for legislation that provides incentives for agricultural industry to locate in Idaho.

Unlike some Western states, Idaho does not provide incentives. Until then, "(we are) just spinning our wheels" on economic development, he said.

Kempthome promises corporate tax rate cut

MOSCOW (AP) - Gov. Dirk Kempthorne continues to hint at pieces of the budget package he will wrap around a record $280 million surplus next January.

In his remarks during the North Idaho Legislative Tour that is currently under way, the governor-said his plan will include a permanent reduction in corporate tax rates, which many view as among life highest in the nation.

Exempthorne declined to clabothe during his remarks at the Quiversity of Idaho beyond saying that the rate reduction for stainess would be part of "broad-sed tax relied."

The governor also gave no indigion of just how much cash will diverted to tax cuts from the arplus, and more importantly from the more than $2 billion in from the more than $2 billion in revenue the current tax system is expected to generate for the 2001-2002 budget year.

This year's spending was based on revenue of just $1.8 billion, well short of what the economy is now expected to generate.

Kempthorne also mentioned a permangant reduction in the personal income tax rate, but once the size of the surplus became known it was a foregone conclusion that at least the modest tenth-of-a-point across the board personal income tax rate reduction approved last year would be made permanent tion approved last year wome amade permanent.

The only question that remained on that front was how much greater the rate cut should be. Each tenth-of-a-point rate cut reduces state tax collections by $13 million.

$13 million.

The maximum rate was increased to 8.2 percent in 1987 when the state was fighting to overcome the drain on tax revenues caused by the near-depression of the mid-1980s. Lawmakers added two new brackets to the progressive tax and raised the top rate from 7.5 percent to 8.2 percent.

Reducing the corporate tax being hiked to 8 percent in 1980, carries a price tag just over $5

Clinton signs Lake Tahoe preservation bill

RENO, Nev. (AP) - President Clinton on Monday signed a bill authorizing Congress to appropriate 5300 million over 10 years for environmental projects to stem the decline of Lake Tahoe. The legislation represents the federal government's share of a 5900 million effort that experts say is needed to prevent Lake Tahoe's clear, azure blue waters from turning a murky green. Once that happens, experts say, the damage will be irreversible. The bill requires the U.S.

Forest Service to develop and the projects on federal lands and authorizes $200 million over 10 years to implement them. An additional $100 million is authorized to help local governments pay for erosion control.

The money itself must come separately, in a congressional appropriations bill. The authorization bill sets the terms under which the money can be spent. Lake Taboe is losing an average of a foot of clarity each year because of algae growth in its waters, largely because of development.

"The restoration act emphasizes at the federal level just how important the Lake Tahoe area is as a scenic and recreational resource of national significance, said Pam Drum, spokes voman for the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, the bistate panel created by Congress in the 1960s to protect the lake that straddles the Nevada-California border.

Group calls for reduced planting

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A record harvest amid depressed markets prompted the Potato Marketing Association of North America on Monday to call on all growers to significantly reduce acreage for the 2001 season.

But John Thompson of the Potato Growers of Idaho said the association call goes too far for Idaho producers.

Oversupply problems of the past several years combined with labor cost increases this year have "further eroded the ability of the North American growers to "remain economically viable," the association conomically viable," the association said in a statement disseminated by Thompson.

It maintained that excess stocks have so undermined growers efforts to increase contract potato prices that the association urged producers to completely drop planting any potatoes for the open market next spring.

Thompson said that is far too radical an approach for Idaho, where growers are split between fresh pack and processing production while the association generally represents process potato growers.

"We agree with the concept of lowering acreage," Thompson said. "But to say don't plant open potatoes and that will solve the problem won't work. It's not real-sistic in Idaho."

The association said that Australia, New Zoaland, South Africa, South America, the United Kingdom and Europe have all expressed an interest in working with the association to bring some equilibrium back to the market and a meeting on the issue will be held early next year. For the past seven years, Idaho growers have been swinging their acreage up and down but at or above 400,000 acres a season. Only in 1995 and last year were plantings under 400,000 acres.

But after dropping to 395,000 acres last year, producers pushed back to a record-tying 415,000 this season

Environmentalists sue feds to protect lynx

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) - The U.S. Forest Service has been accused by three environmental groups of failing to adequately protect the Canada lynx in Idaho and elsewhere and a federal judge has been asked to order to and elsewhere and a federal judge has been asked to order the gov-ernment to fulfill its responsibili-ties under the Endangered pecies Act. Friends of the Clearwater in Idaho, Friends of the Wild Swan in Montana and The Ecology Center in Montana have made good on their threat last June to sue for failure to protect the lynx for the adverse effects of friefighting, logging, mining and recreational development.

The medium-sized cat, similar to the bobcat, was lived as a theret.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Its range includes the American Northeast, Great Lakes region and northern and southern Rockies, but Montana has three-quarters of the breeding population in the continental United States.

The environmentalists ask a U.S. District Court judge in Missoula to stop the Forest Service from conducting any activity that could jeopardize the lynx or its habitat. "We're seeing incremental degradation of lynx habitat without any protective standards in place in the forest plans," said Arlene Montgomery, spokes-woman for the Wild Swan. "The listing apparently hasn't made an impression on federal foresters yet."

ServiceMaster

ServiceMaster of Magic Valley is a cleaning and disaster restoration company, which has been serving the Magic Valley for over 23 years. We specialize in commercial and residential carpet, upholstery and drapery cleaning. Most carpet manufacturers recommend the truck mount extraction system.

ServiceMaster is also adding a new technology for the cleaning and maintenance of wood floor finishes. In fire and water restoration, we use state-of-the-art equipment for cleaning and deodorization such as ozone, thermal fogging, and ultra-sonic cleaning. Ozone equipment takes the oxygen out of the air and is very effective with smoke and sewer back-up-odors. Service Master also features equipment for detecting water damage and for structural drying. We also do reconstruction where restoration is not possible

Microsoft speeds up Windows integration

LAS VEGAS-Showing once again the characteristic Teintless easi in the characteristic Teintless pess of his company, Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates kicked off the Fall Comdex trade show by Gemonstrating a handful of technologies aimed at further blurring iny distinction between Windows and the Web.

Speaking before an estimated 12,000 people attending the show in the MGM Grand, the largest audience ever for a Comdex keynote presentation, Gates nanounced blistering fast tracks cor three new technologies symbolizing Microsoft's vision of "any time, anywhere" computing "from any device."

His presentation came as timdex, the computer industry's gunt annual trade show, kicked

His presentation came as index, the computer industry's grant annual trade show, kitches of a week of speeches, demonstrations and omnipresent netwins and the computer of the co spects.

Foremost in Gates' address was release of a betn, or test, vern of Microsoft's .NET software ols that programmers need to the Web.

He also discussed a Tablet PC consisting largely of a notebook-size

largely of a notebook-size screen that can be used to take notes and display documents.

The announcements served notice to skeptics that Microsoft, hit hard in the stock market and on the legal front this year, is serious about making Windows the key technology for computer users of the future. Since the mid-1990s, advocates of free software have emphasized a message: Linux, Java and other public-domain programs tailored to the Internet and the advent of many gadgets will replace the dominance of Windows and desktop personal computers.

The release of the first beta for computers.

The release of the first beta for Visual Studio NET, which Microsoft hopes to make available in linal form the second half of next year, is aimed at giving Windows programmers the tools and capabilities to create programs.

CyberSeniors, a computer training program, has created dozens of sites across Mains enculaing a new cyber cafe in Bortland, to help seniors break into the world of computers. It recently crypanded into Massachusetts and New Hampshire, where it now has several sites.

At the group's cyber cafe in downtown Portland, Charles Huntoon, 84, admitted as he sat on an overstuffed couch that he had problems with the thing he called "this box" before getting some help.

The cafe offers instruction as basic as clicking a mouse, and as basic as clicking a mouse, and as advanced as evaluating the worth of information on the Internet. The goal is to provide seniors with access to the health information, social connectedness and creative opportunities offered by computers and the Internet.

With 2,400 graduates in Maine, the program has expanded to 62 locations statewide and a handful of locations in other states. It has proven popular. There are waiting lists — more than 500 people in Worcester, Mass., alone — at every location because so many older people have become interested in computers.

Idaĥo GOP recognizes rep's wife

BOISE (AP) – Years of unpaid labor for the Idaho Republican Party and her flamboyant, legally troubled husband's congressional office earned Comile Hansen one of the 538 votes that really count toward electing the next presi-dent.

The wife of former U.S. Rep. lansen is one of the four ectors scheduled to cast their ballots on Dec. 18 for Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the GOP nominee who trounced Democratic Vice President Al

Gore in Idaho on Nov. 7.
Mrs. Hansen, 66, of Pocatello, was nominated by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne as a representative of hardworking political spouses whose efforts yield no pay and little recognition.

Yet some Republicans were troubled about recognizing some-one whose husband served three-years in federal prison after being convicted of operating a multimi-lion-dollar check-kiting scheme that left him owing investors $18 million.

sure statement, a 1984 conviction that cost him his bid for an eighth term in Congress by only 170 votes to Democrat Richard Stallings.

That conviction later was invalidated by the U.S. Suprene Court, which ruled that the financial distribution will be supported by the U.S. Suprene Court, equivement only applied to the executive branch of government, not the legislative.

"When I read through the list of electors, I did have some people say, Hmmm, Connie Hansen. Why Connie Hansen." Idaho Republican Party Chairman Trent Clark said. "Sort of in part as a result of what her husband has pone through, as a collective population we've sort of forgotten her years of service. This is a good way to remind people."

Reintroduced wolves clash with ranchers

PARADISE VALLEY, Mont. – Long after the fanfare that surrounded the return of the gray wolf to Yellowstone National Park, the most telling chapter might have been written this year by an unruly pack of wolves known as the Sheep Mountain pack – a story of what happens when a predator is bigger and wilder than the biggest wilderness you can find.

wilder than the biggest wilderness you can find.
Only last year, there were 13
Sheep Mountain wolves roaming the grassy plateaus of this ranching valley north of Yellowstone.
Today, there is one - or the ghost of one, a lone black hulk some have seen, or thought they have seen, slipping along the edge of them.

have seen, or thought they have seen, slipping along the edge of the forest.

Six were killed by sharpshooters responding to attacks on livestock. I'we were found mysteriously shot to death in the hills. The alpha female, a tough wolf who hunted food for a litter of pups while limping after being hit by a car, was captured and died after being chased into exhaustion and injected with a tranquilizer. Three others are being held on media magnate Ted Turner's ranch, undergoing training with electric shock collars in an attempt to teach them not to attack cattle—to teach them not to attack cattle—to teach them not to attack cattle—to teach them not to attack content in the minds of some wildlife advocates, to be a little more like good neighbors and a little less like wolves.

Still, the Sheep Mountain pack, one of a growing number that have moved to colonize outside Yellowstone, is one of the wolf reintroduction program's success stories—proof, whatever their settles have been controlled even outside the protected reaches of the park, Yet the pack's fate also is a warning of what lies alaed, as wolves fill up the wilderness and move into an uneasy co-existence with the inhabited West.

But Bangs believes lethal removal might be the only way ultimately to save wolves, and some of the biggest environmental groups involved in wolf recovery agree. Shooting wolves that have learned to prey on livestock reduces the caloric needs of the pack and prevents other wolves from learning to do the same thing.

Leave offending wolves in place, Bangs says, and ranchers will take matters into their own hands. "But even when we remove the wolves, you've still got dead cattle, dead wolves and (angry) people"-in other words, Paradise Valley.

Some residents believe that wildlife agents didn't know where the wolves are at any given time, certainly not in time to keep them away from their cattle. Bangs' team spent days trying to scare wolves into relocating, and they did –about half a mile away.

Rancher Martin Davis slept at his pasture for much of the summer. One day, he found six of his cows surrounded by seven wolves. The large black' male that appeared to be their leader would bite at them, and, while most of the cows huddled in terror, the boldest cow repeatedly butted the wolf. Davis fired his handgun into the air.

"But... they were frothing at the mouth and bleeding through the most."

The turning point probably came in September, when Shee Mountain wolves found a dead cow in Malcolm's neighbor's field and ate it – acquiring a taste for beef. A month later, a rancher reported finding a calf killed by wolves.

Bangs ordered three adult males of the pack to be killed. Ficking out three adult males from a helicopter swooping low over the hillsdes proved difficult, and a federal sharpshooter would up shooting three pups – young wolves most likely not guilty of arrything.

That night, a rancher reported that a large black wolf had backed a group of his horses against a diff. Bangs ordered the removal of the Sheep Mountain alpha male, leaving the alpha female, dubbed No. 16, without a mate and the pack without a male leader.

but the bottom line is, we have to come up with the funds somewhere, somehow to pay for the services people want," said Lehi Mayor Ken Greenwood. His city has adopted a $1-e-month tax on cell phones that goes into effect plan 1. "A cost hit he elderly, least to repeople to swallow," be said. "It doesn't hit he elderly, just the well-heeled out on the freeway with a phone to their ears." The Utah League of Cities and Towns designed a $1-a-month-cell phone ordinance based on one set up by Kayaville, which has been tuxing mobile phones since 1994 and now brings in $35,000 a year. Phone companies will add the fee to customers' bills, and will be charged according to what city the bill goes to.

Municipalities are wortied they'il lose revenue if more people shun traditional phones, which are charged a city franchise tax of up to 6 percent, said Paul Morris, West Valley City's attorney, who helped designed the model ordinance. Franchise tax revenues have already slowed, and Morris said cities suspect it's because people are turning to be accused the said cities also felt that if they would tax any phone service, they would tax any phone service, they should tax all.

Study of ancient brain finds speech ability

The brain of a female individual who lived perhaps 400,000 years ago is so similar to humans' that scientists believe she had the capacity for speech, language and complex thought.

Doug Breadfield and his callagues at Mount Sinal School of Medicine in New York City reported that analysis of the nearly complete cranium determined than it belonged to an ancestor of modern humans, even though the female lived among a species whose fossils have not revealed such brain speciality. Broadfield, a physical anthropologist starting out in the field, was asked last year to study the fossil, which originated in Indonesia and turned up in Manhattan last year. It didn't take but a moment before he realized that he was looking at a Homo erectus, but something was off. In other fossils of the time described, the skull looked like a rugby football. But this was different, rounded and globular like a human brain. "I knew right away that his was an interesting individual," Broadfield said. The findings were discussed last week at the Society for Neuroscience annual meeting. Based on this skull, Broadfield said, "Homo erectus probably possessed a degree of cognitive specialization and a faculty for language approaching that of our own species." This individual may be the link between Homo erectus and Homo sapiens. The fossil has been named Sm. 3, and it is the most nearly complete cranitum of an individual from that period of time yet identified. The species Homo erectus goes back 1.8 million years, and individuals disappeared about 100,000 years ago. Homo sapiens evolved after Homo erectus.

The brain itself is about half the size of a modern human brain. "The size of the brain isn't what we look for," Broadfield said. "It's how the brain is corganized. This brain is contained in two lobes of tissue that is saymmetrical, much more human-like than anyone had ever expectative of the said of the same had ever expectative of the same proper than anyone ded we don't see these asymmetries until Homo sapiens evolved."

Trio of different weddings fulfills in-laws' dreams

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I devised a wedding plan that pleased both our families. He is the youngest child; I am an only child. We've always been especially close to each of our moms. We wanted to make their wedding dreams for us come true, as well as our own. The solution? We had THREE celebrations! One for us, and one for each mom. Sound crays? It's ebrations! One for us, and one each mom. Sound crazy? It's not.

My fiance and I eloped to Santa Fe, N.M., for a private ceremony with only my best friend and my itance's brother in attendance.
We hired a professional photographer to capture every moment for our families. It was a beautiful ceremony in a church with a minister.

Three months later, my mom arranged a 200-person sit-down wedding reception in my hometown. She asked our long-time Presbyterian minister to "bless" mother-in-law hosted i Catholic validation at a church in my husband's hometown. She was overjoyed to provide the Mass and party she had always hoped for her son.

All in all, we had three wed dings, and celebrated our marriage for a year. It was perfect.
Both sets of parents attended each other's events, and everyone got to eat, drink and invite whomever they wanted. I didn't get stressed-out like some brides do—I just enjoyed myself. Abby, I highly recommend this solution to anyone who is trying to please everyone. You can have your wedding cake and eat it, too.

- WE DID IT OUR WAY -WE DID IT OUR WAY DEAR WE DID IT: Providing all the in-laws can afford it, your solution seems amicable for everyone. It's an original. My con-gratulations to all of you.

DEAR ABBY: I was disappoint ed in your answer to "Disappointed in Arkansıs," who was hurt because her brother didn't share the full amount of money he received on a piece of property he had rented from her. You should have sugested that this family use a local mediation service. Mediation is a process that helps people discuss issues and settle problems. Mediators give people a chance to talk about the situation – and ways to solve it – with a neutral third party (the mediator). Mediators do not take sides, tell people what to do or make decisions. All decisions and solutions come from the parties solutions come from the parties themselves.

Mediation provides people a place to talk about issues in a safe environment, conducive to working together, rather than in a courroom (which is much more expensive and adversarial).
Many communities have mediation centers. Remember, there are at least two sides to every story, and through mediation all, sides will be hard.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Where ignorance is bliss, Tis folly to be wise." — Thomas Gray

A player addicted to finesses will do well in today's slam. It's the top player who knows about complex endings who will find defeat.

At teams, both South players reached a reasonable club slam.

One South won his diamond ace, drew trumps, and cashed the king and ace of hearts, revealing the poor split. Relying only on a fortunate spade position. South led the spade jack from duramy, ecovered by the queen, king and ace. West extited safely in diamonds, and South had to try another finesse against East's spade nine. It won, and the slam succeeded.

other finesse against East's spade nine. It won, and the slam succeeded.

In the replay, a world champion foresaw the complications of relying on the spade suit. For the spade suit to be fruitful. East had to have both the queen and the nine of spades. So he found a complex play in which East had to have only one card (the spade ace) instead of two.

Alter discovering the bad heart break, South cashed durinny's diamond king and discarded a spade. Then he led a low spade to his king and went down quickly, losing two spade tricks.

Why did he refuse to finesse? He played for East to have only one card instead of two. If East had the acc of spades (including A-Q doubleton), South would make the slam. After South wins is spade king, cashing two trumps would crucify East. If East blanke the spade ace, South would give him his ace and enjoy a free leart finesse for 12 winners. And if East blanked the heart jack in stead, South would win five heart finesse for 12 winners. And if East blanked the heart jack in stead, South would win five heart finesse for 12 winners. And if East blanked the heart jack in stead, South would win five heart finesse it doesn't pay to know the summer it doesn't pay to
